So sorry Retro if this isn't quite what you wanted

Best to listen the the song while reading

Fading in as the music grows louder, encompassing the duo as an dull orange tentacle wraps around the form of a small amethyst octopus spinning it in a beautiful fan, bioluminescent colour from the surrounding life erupting around them making them look like flowers floating through a nights sky lit up by fireworks. Extending too full length the orange squid swings and spins the octopus as freely as he can before he releases, sending her spinning away but careful enough to swim behind her and catch her again, releasing more light into the night.

Now a Tan collared lizard holds a leopard lizard close to his chest, the leopard lizard is grey with orange ovals sequenced down her sides with a rainforest green layered dress bringing out her natural colours. Her partner wearing a fading red loose suit over brown scales speckled by white, something looking so simple alone but brings out the colour and the beauty of his partner's, differences so complimenting as they spin together only parting for moments at a time. Swaying together with the movement of each other's hips before he hoists his partner high in the air, throwing her up and catching her in a subtle swing before doing it again and swinging her through his legs.

As the two regain their balance they turn to each other but leave space between them as they start mirroring each other, Birds this time one a glowing Baltimore Oriole, the other a beautiful eastern sea bird. Step for step is mirrored, talons clicking in rhythmic succession while the oriole flares out his feathers allowing the sea bird to see the beauty of the thick orange on his chest fade to the dull yellow and all the variations in between making her imagine for a second that she was looking at a sunset. Snapping back to reality as the oriole sweeps her into his chest making even more colours come to life and to anyone watching they might see the beauty of a blue sea overtaking by a slow sunset.

Thrown from the grasp of a salamander in board shorts and a tee, a small gecko in loose clothes looks up to his face, both of them have smiles plastered on their face, both bodies filled with excitement and passion as the jump and bounce around in the crowded room. Hands in the air swinging wildly before coming in for a quick and friendly tussle, the laughter of each other only echoing in their ears. Hips moving with passion only to lead and only the energy inside themselves to limit what they do, with heavy breaths they finally fall into each other looking for the support of the other as they rest.

"You know Nick, this is nice, a night out with just us and our excitement to lead", Judy spoke with a silvery voice. Head on Nick's tuxedo clad chest just rocking slowly around with naught but a care but themselves, the tail of Judy's dress slowly trailing on the smoky white floor. It was a beautiful thing to Nick, Faded purple a few tones lower the Judy's amethyst eyes to help them pop out with a ribbon of glossy sequins gliding up from the tip of the dresses tail leading up around her entire body before parsing out at her left shoulder.

>"You know I'd do anything for you right?"

"I know, and thank you, thank you for everything"

>"No thank you Carrots, you really pulled me together", Nick whisper into Judy's ear while pulling her closer as Nick rests his head on top of Judy's only making her cling harder, gently swaying together with no care for tomorrow.
